Applicability of Russian linguistic traditions for researches in morphology of modern Vietnamese language

In Russian science linguistic (and Vietnamese language researches too) is very developed from long ago. But still we don't have any universal theory in any aspect, except probably the phonetic. Morphology seems to be the most disputable aspect from all the others, both in Russians and Vietnamese researches. It's necessary to make an observation of reasons, approaches that make this researches to be so different, start from some points of Russian linguistic tradition and analyze how do they affect the Russian Vietnamese language theory in general and specially the morphology aspect.
