

Little Voices from Fukushima

Filmvorführung

15. April 2016, 18.30 Uhr
Universität Hamburg
Hauptgebäude (ESA 1), Hörsaal J

Asien-Afrika-Institut

Japanologie

Universität Hamburg

DER FORSCHUNG | DER LEHRE | DER BILDUNG

Little Voices from Fukushima is a documentary film dedicated to Japanese mothers and children living in the post-meltdown world of the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant disaster. In the course of telling their stories, Director Hitomi Kamanaka takes us to Belarus, where we learn from mothers who experienced the Chernobyl nuclear disaster 28 years ago.

Hitomi KAMANAKA is a Japanese documentary filmmaker and media activist who has been working on nuclear power and radiation issues for two decades. She studied at the National Film Board of Canada and then worked as a media activist at Paper Tiger in New York. After returning to Japan, she directed many TV documentaries.

「小さき声のキャン」